CITY CELEBRATES ARMISTICE DAY IN FITTING MANNER

Col. Brucker Pleads for Higher Type of Citizenship in World

When all factory whistles blew and church bells rang on Wednesday, November 11 the populace was fully aware of the day set aside for commemoration of the signing of the peace treaty.

Seven years ago that day, what a day it was, for mothers with sons in the trenches, for the boys in the trenches, on the high seas, and in camps at home. The terrible suspense was over on that day, and, seven years later, last Wednesday, this city befittingly commemorated that day.

The festivities began with a dinner at noon in the K.C. hall. The auxiliary served a splendid dinner and the boys called for seconds, even as in the days of yore. With the color bearers and the color guard leading the local legionnaires, as many as could get away for two hours, the parade wended its way to the Normal auditorium.

The Rev. C. B. Hawkins opened with a prayer which was followed by a fine song by the Normal quartet. Pres. E. C. Warriner then introduced the main speaker of the day, Col. Brucker, prosecuting attorney in Saginaw.

Briefly sketching the history of the war, from the assassination in Serbia to the huge Ludendorff thrust at Paris Col. Brucker led up to the main part of his speech, "What Armistice Day Should Mean."

"I have no use for the willy-nilly, wishy-washy pacifist, nor for the dominating militarist," said Col. Brucker. "On this day the thing we seek most is peace and peace calls for a middle class nation, but we must be prepared. Please don't quote me as saying I favor the world court idea as it stands, but I do favor SOME SORT of a world court, whereby peace may be had forever. Nations should be able to agree on some plan for peace," he declared.

"But we cannot only speak of peace among nations," continued the colonel. "We must root lawlessness. We must see that the laws for which this flag stands are obeyed."

In conclusion Col. Brucker pleaded for a high type citizenship, such as the boys fought for.

WORKER'S PRAYER IS SERMON TEXT

Rev. Ledford Gives Third of Series of Sermons

On last Sunday morning in the local Methodist church Rev. W. F. Ledford spoke on the subject, "The Worker's Prayer," this being the third sermon in the series he is now giving on the general theme, "The Worker and His Church." The text for this sermon was: "And as he was praying, the fashion of his countenance was altered, (Luke 9:29). Rev. Ledford said in part:

"Jesus took Peter, James and John and went up into a mountain to pray. He had the habit of prayer and these men were accustomed to going with him to the secret place of prayer. These same three men went with him into the Garden of Gethsemane. He took them with him because they were more sympathetic and entered more nearly into the spirit and purpose of his life. Jesus taught that men ought 'always to pray and not to faint.'"

"As he was praying, the fashion of his countenance was altered." Moses and Elijah communed with him. Prayer transforms man's inner and outer world and brings him into fellowship with the highest, noblest and most saintly characters of all ages. On the mountain top of prayer were Moses, Elijah and Christ. What a glorious fellowship for Peter, James and John. When any humble Christian ascends the mountain of prayer he comes into the atmosphere of the law, the Prophets and the Gospel. Prayer nourishes and refreshes the soul and prepares one for the arduous tasks of life.

"That poet preacher, Bishop Quayle, said, 'Every large life is devout. Carelessness of God is a sign of a small soul—Prayer is man and woman at their best. We are never so sublime as when we make our prayer. We have in that one act shown that we are not children of the ground, but children of the sky.'"

"Dr. Charles M. McCormick has said that, 'The root idea of prayer is not petition but the harmony of man's will and life with the will and purpose of God.' Dr. Borden P. Bowne, a Christian philosopher, in his chapter on prayer says, 'This religious desire and efforts of the soul to relate itself and

C. S. C. TO GIVE BIG CHARITY FROLIC

Will be Held at Masonic Hall, November 24

Real fun and entertainment has been planned for the big annual charity frolic, to be given by the Child Study club on Tuesday evening, November 24 at the Masonic hall.

The variety of amusements to be indulged in will meet the taste of all, says the committee in charge. For those who do not dance games of bridge and ruck have been planned. Refreshments will be served and favors given.

The proceeds of this charity frolic will go to help the philanthropic work of the Child Study club, which is doing some fine work in this community for the needy children.

GIRL RESERVE PARTY

The Girl Reserves put on excellent dancing party at the high school gym last Saturday night. The gym was tastily decorated and as the first strains of the music started the vanguard of the 70 couple who were in attendance filed through the receiving line. Supt. and Mrs. Ganiard, Mr. and Mrs. Wendt and Miss Rank received the young people.

The College Legionnaires furnish ed the music.

SEWAGE PLANT NOT NEEDED YET

Group Plans Boulevard Lighting System Here

With the state forcing action for sewage disposal plants in all cases where sewage runs into rivers, this city is faced with a like problem in the future. Just when this move will be necessary is unknown but City Manager Willman believes that this city will not see a sewage disposal plant here for 10 years.

The city has a 1-2 acre plot of ground on which the plant could be built to adequately handle the sewage. This tract is east of the Columbia Sugar company and north of the Central Gas company.

At a meeting of the city planning commission Tuesday night, a boulevard lighting system was recommended and the completion of the paving of Normal avenue was strongly urged. Work was begun on a zoning ordinance and it is believed that such an ordinance will meet with the favor of the workers at the spring election.

Lutherans Seek Funds to Obtain Valparaiso Univ.

Lutheran man and woman power is mobilizing for what is being called the greatest forward step of the Lutheran church of the present generation. An army of between ten and twenty thousand men and women, the pick of the church, is enlisting to establish the first Lutheran university in America at Valparaiso, Indiana. The workers of the Bay City

Michigan District, captained by the Rev. L. H. Voss, pastor of the Lutheran church at Auburn, Mich., met at the parish school hall, of Zion Lutheran church of Bay City on Wednesday evening, November 11. The Rev. Emil H. Voss presided at the meeting.

F. J. LANKENAU

After this conference, the workers, under the direction of their congregational chairman, will work out the details of the canvass in their own churches, and on Friday, November 17, in each church a final workers' meeting will be held. That is the zero hour in this enterprise, the last moment of planning and preparation before the call comes to battle. On Sunday, November 20, a special service on christian education will be held and immediately thereafter the workers will take up the task. The task will be done December 7. The Rev. Carl Baumann, Mt. Pleasant Lutheran pastor, will assist in the appeal in his district.

TOURIST CLUB

Tourist club members met at the home of Mrs. M. S. Wardrop, south Mission street, last Thursday afternoon with Mrs. Henry A. Miller as assistant hostess.

Following a short business meeting Miss Elizabeth Wightman gave a delightful review of Arnold Bennett's "Riceyman's Steps."

The next meeting of the club will be at the home of Mrs. F. H. Dusenbury, Thursday, November 19.

HART FOUND TO BE WINNER OF CASE

Judge Declares Hart is Sole Owner of Land in Question

First reports received in the Hart-Eggleston land case, involving the possession of disputed Indian land were somewhat garbled and as a result Eggleston was pronounced winner of the case by state papers. Concrete evidence in the form of the official opinion from Judge Tuttle states that Hart is the sole owner of the land in question, and that the patent under which he claims, is good.

The trick play talked about in the case—in which papers stated that a local attorney had secured a deed from an Indian of a name like patentee, some years ago—was found to have been carried out by a real estate man, not an attorney; and when Mr. Hart learned of the trick he disregarded the paper obtained for him by the real estate agent.

Judge Tuttle in his opinion did recommend that Eggleston be granted some other tract of Indian land in the country; but such other land seems to be unavailable now.

MANY MERCHANTS AID IN BEET WORK

Students to go Into the Fields Tomorrow to Help Out

At 7:30 this morning business men by the score gathered at the Columbia Sugar plant and went into the surrounding rural territory to help the farmer get his beets out of the ground. On Saturday, students from the high school, academy and normal will venture into the fields to give all help possible.

It is estimated that nearly 3,000 acres of beets are yet unharvested. The predicament is indeed precarious at the present time and unless the beets now in the ground are harvested within the next week it is feared that they will be frozen solid in the ground.

It is stated that many of the Mexican beet weeder left in post haste hurry when the snow and cold weather wave hit the county and as a result of this coupled with the bad weather conditions the beet harvest has been considerably retarded.

KINNEY P.-T. CLUB HAS DAD'S NIGHT

Address by Rev. Hawkins is Enjoyed by Big Crowd

The second regular meeting of the Kinney school Parent-Teacher's association was held in the first grade room of the school Tuesday evening.

The evening was designated by the program committee as "Dad's night," and the committee composed of the following: Supt. Ganiard, W. S. Horn, S. Thompson, W. Morton, H. Huber, and J. W. Stinson.

The first grade room had been transformed into a most hospitable setting for the meeting together of the sixty parents and teachers, who thoroughly enjoyed the talk by Rev. C. B. Hawkins. In his talk Mr. Hawkins made a strong argument and plea for the cooperation of teachers and parents in developing the physical, mental, social, and spiritual side of the child.

During the social hour which closed the meeting, the "Dads" served "red hots" and coffee.

WELFARE DAY FOR C. S. C.

Tuesday, November 10, in the Child Study club was a busy day. The hum of sewing machines and plying of needles by thirty ladies made a very interesting picture. Suitcases of slightly worn children's clothes were mended and made ready for wear, so that no child in this city will feel the chill of winter. A pot luck dinner was served at 12:30. Visiting and pleasant exchanges of ideas made it a very happy and also profitable meeting. Mrs. Robert Kane was hostess, and Mrs. Wm. Garvin was assistant hostess.

There will be a rummage sale at November 14. (adv)

CENTRAL NORMAL TO BE HOST TO HOMECOMERS NEXT WEEK

LOCAL TEAMS FARE WELL ON WEEK-END

Academy and Highs Win as Central Ties Western State

Mt. Pleasant's football teams again proved their supremacy on the grid-irons of the state when the Central Normal team held Western State Normal to a tie; the academy team defeated a Saginaw academy team 16-7; and the local highs won from the highly touted Midland eleven 13-12.

The Mt. Pleasant-Midland game was the only home encounter and what a battle it was! Midland pushed across the first score, but failed to kick goal, the Mt. Pleasant line breaking thru like madmen. The first local score came as the result of a series of line plunges down the field and a wide end run by Dugid, who was recently shifted from end to halfback by Coach Johnson. Smith kicked goal and the locals led 7-6. Late in the second

WHY MEN GET HUNG

Many have asked for football predictions and, while the writer claims to be no expert critic or prophet supreme, he has gone over the dope and records the scores for next Saturday as follows:

Central 7, Valparaiso 3.
M.P.H.S. 14, Reed City 7.
Michigan 21, Ohio State 3.
Mich. State 0, Wisconsin 14.
Dartmouth 24, Chicago 7.
Iowa 7, Minnesota 7.
Purdue 6, Northwestern 14.
Illinois 36, Wabash 0.
Notre Dame 13, Carnegie Tech 0.
Indiana 18, Rose Poly 7.
Pennsylvania 21, Pitt 3.
Princeton 13, Yale 7.
Colgate 21, Syracuse 0.
Harvard 6, Brown 20.
Army 14, Columbia 7.

Note: The writer lost a bet last week by claiming a certain team would get a touchdown. The team its opponents, failed to score, as did its opponents. Moral: Don't bet on the above predictions.

half the Midland fullback received Mt. Pleasant's kickoff on the 15 yard line and twisted and dodged his way thru the entire local team. It was a beautiful 85 yard run and put the visitors in the lead.

By hard line plunges, fine football, and excellent interference the locals worked the ball to the 15 yard line and on another sweeping enr run Dugid took the ball over. The game ended shortly after that play. Today Mt. Pleasant plays its last home game with Reed City. Turn out for a win.

Danny Garvin and Kennedy with the fighting Irish line brought the bacon home for the academy by a 16-7 win over the Saginaw boys. This put the Sacred Heart team in the semi-finals for the championship honors in the catholic league. Keep up the work boys!

The unexpected happened at Western State Saturday when the Maroon and Gold team held the Western Staters to a scoreless tie. Western State, according to reports, had expected a score in their favor and were nearly defeated. Central had the ball on the three foot line, a yard from goal; but Central back slipped in the mud and the opportunity was lost. Central plays Valparaiso university tomorrow. These two teams played a scoreless tie last year and a good game is looked for. Coach Barnard's proteges are in the best of condition and going good now.

FIRE AT INDIAN SCHOOL

Fire, that broke out at midnight Saturday, for a time threatened the destruction of the Indian school dairy barn. In the face of a gale, the city fire department made the run to the scene of the blaze and, with the help of the school employees, got the blaze under control.

The fire started in the part used as a classroom; but just what caused the blaze has not been ascertained. The water and smoke caused the most damage.

Many Former Students are Expected Back for Big Events

Central Normal will be host to a great throng of homecoming alumni next Friday and Saturday and elaborate preparations have been made for the entertainment of the "old students".

Last fall homecoming was officially observed at Central for the first time. So enthusiastic were the "alums" that the event has been made permanent. The biggest attraction on the program is the homecoming game, which will be between Albion college and the Maroon and Gold team.

Last year the locals lost to the Methodists by a 7-6 score. This year the teachers are out for revenge and hope to gladden the hearts of the alumni by winning.

The homecoming celebrations will start Friday night with a huge bon fire and a dance at the gym and one down town. Saturday morning will see a parade of floats line up at the normal and wend its way townward. prizes are being offered for the best and most humorous floats and many have entered dilapidated "tin lizzies" and other conveyances in the parade.

Reunion luncheons will be held at various places Saturday by many social and departmental organizations so that former members of such former clubs may meet the present members.

Many impromptu celebrations have been planned and the Central Normal officials are arranging for speeches by some of the alumni body. The celebrations will end Saturday night with a dance down town.

MAIL TO GO ONLY ON OPEN TRUNK AND CROSS ROADS

Postmaster Declares Overseers Must Keep Roads Open

Under the decision of the State Highway Department to scrape the snow off the Trunk Lines, a serious problem presents itself concerning the service of the rural mail carriers. It is very evident that when the snow is kept off the main roads, there will be considerable time during the winter when they will be bare and unfit for sleighs. During this same time there will be many roads, especially the cross roads, where a car cannot be driven and a sleigh, the Trunk Lines will be impassable, and if he drives a car the cross roads will be impassable. How is the carrier to serve his route under such conditions? And every carrier has some of the main roads to serve. There is only one answer to the problem, that is that the various overseers must see to it that the cross roads are kept open so that the mails can be carried. Otherwise, under the recent ruling of the Post Office Department, such roads as are not kept open will have to be cut out and the rural mail service will suffer just in proportion as the routes are cut out.

I am calling the attention of overseers to this matter now, so that adequate preparations can be made to have the cross road opened—either the snow scraped off the road or vehicles driven through to open the way, so that the carrier will not be left to his own resources in fighting the drifts. A carrier might be able to get through a mile or so occasionally, but to expect him to open ten or fifteen miles after every storm is expecting the impossible, and he will not be obliged to do it. Patrons of the routes should be willing and glad to assist in maintaining service regularly.

Isabella County School News

Education is becoming well-nigh universal in America. The rapidity of its expansion within the past half century has no precedent. Our system of public instruction, administered by state and local officers, is peculiarly suited to our habits of life and to our plan of government, and it has brought forth abundant fruit.

In some favored localities only one, two, or three persons in a thousand between the ages of 16 to 20 are classed as illiterate. High schools and academies easily accessible are offering to the youth of America a greater measure of education than that which the founders of the Nation received from Harvard, William and Mary, Yale, and Princeton; and so widely diffused has advanced study become that the bachelor's degree is no longer a symbol of unusual learning.

All this is reason for gratification; but in the contemplation of worthy achievement we must still be mindful that full provision has not yet been made throughout the country for education of either elementary, secondary, or higher grade. Large numbers have not been reached by the blessings of education. The efficiency of the schools in rural communities is, in general, relatively low; too often their equipment is meagre, their teachers poorly prepared, and their terms short. High schools, notwithstanding their extraordinary growth, have not kept pace with the demand for instruction; even in great cities many students are restricted to half-time attendance, and in outlying districts such schools are frequently insufficient in number or inadequate in quality. In higher education the possibilities of existing institutions have been reached and it is essential that their facilities be extended or that junior colleges in considerable numbers be established.

These deficiencies leave no room for complacency. The utmost endeavor must be exerted to provide for every child in the land the full measure of education which his need and his capacity demand; and none must be permitted to live in ignorance. Marked benefit has come in recent years from nation-wide campaigns for strengthening public sentiment for universal education, for upholding the hands of constituted school authorities, and for promoting meritorious legislation in behalf of the schools. Such revivals are wholesome and should continue. Now, therefore, I, Calvin Coolidge, President of the United States, do proclaim the week beginning November sixteenth as American Education Week, and I urge that it be observed throughout the United States. I recommend that the Governors of the several states issue proclamations setting forth the necessity of education to a free people and requesting that American Education Week be appropriately celebrated in their respective states. I urge further that local officers, civic, social, and religious organizations, and citizens of every occupation contribute with all their strength to the advance of education, and that they make of American Education Week a special season of mutual encouragement in promoting that enlightenment upon which the welfare of the Nation depends.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Calvin Coolidge.

We hope that every child in the rural schools will become familiar with this proclamation. You know now how important it is to observe American Education Week. I am sure that each school in our county is planning to make this year's observance of American Education Week the very best. When you receive the posters place one in all the prominent places in your district. The tags may be worn by boys and girls and the visitors.

Cordially yours,
C. N. Vance.

We had a two weeks potato vacation this month. Now that the crops are harvested we will have a better attendance.

Helen, William and Stanley Waltz are moving away. We will miss them from our classes.

Our decorations were, witches, cats, and jack-o'-lanterns, for this month. The third and fourth grades made books called "Thoroughbreds," which helped the children to learn to be courteous and careful.

Mr. Vance visited our school this month.

Mrs. Leighton attended the State Teachers convention at Big Rapids. She also attended the county Sunday school convention at Rosebush. Mrs. Chapman taught in her place. Chester Burkholder, Audra Guy, and Dorothy Murray received 100 in spelling in the fourth grade. Tony Bacome, and Ralph Diehl in the other grades.

The children are enjoying the study of our current event paper.

We had a Hallowe'en program and party. The children did very nicely with the program. Our room was lighted with candles and jack-o'-lanterns. For our party we had pop corn and apples and a marshmallow roast. There were twelve visitors present. Mr. Bacome let us use his phonograph. Mrs. Kennedy and Jennie Ubele visited us. We are always glad to have visitors. We wish there were more.

BLANCHARD SCHOOLS

Junior High
G. Caldwell, teacher

The ninth grade served a Hallowe'en supper to the rest of the high school, a week from last Tuesday night, at the school house. They all had a very fine time.

The boys that were out Hallowe'en night had to go out again Monday morning and make things right that were made wrong Saturday night.

Our "Ready Jell" has arrived and we are all ready to sell it so we can send for our new clock.

We are proud to have a new border on the American Flag in the front of our room.

We have a new method of having current events which we call "Yearly Wisdom."

Mrs. Caldwell entertained the juniors and seniors Friday evening, with progressive flinch. Mr. Clegg and Lulu Dargitz received first prize, while Dorothy Briggs and Kenneth won the bobby prize.

Harold Grim, reporter.

Intermediate Room

Several people from our room were picking up potatoes last week.

The following people are ahead in our spelling contest, Susan Orr, fourth grade; Gladys Chaney, fifth grade; and Nadine Divelbiss in the sixth grade.

The fifth and sixth grades are enjoying the study of "Snowbound" in their English class.

Our room has been invited to a box social Friday evening, given by the junior high room.

The following people have their penmanship papers posted on the board, Roy Chaney, Richard Houghton, Nadine Divelbiss, Addie Jeffrey, and Lyle Sitzer.

Minnie Honeywell, reporter.

Primary Room

We have five new pupils in our room. They are, Carrie, Orland, and Lorenza Dickson, Marie Welhalf, and Donna Snyder.

Our food posters made by the first and second grades are very interesting.

Our room went into the main room Friday morning to hear some very interesting talks by Rev. Griffin, and Mr. Wise.

We have some new supplies in our room that we enjoy very much.

WINN HIGH SCHOOL

Senior High

Mrs. Hetherington, teacher
We are still having school in spite of all discouragements.
Floyd Curtiss is in school again after a long absence.

The members of the eleventh grade literature class are reading, "The Merchant of Venice."

The tenth grade geometry class seems to be getting along quite well with their cross-line puzzles.

Visitors are welcome at all times.

Clara Lentz, reporter.

Junior High

Mrs. Hyde, teacher

Gwendolyn Ackerman of the ninth grade gave a talk to the eighth history class, Wednesday morning on "Life in the Union Army," as told her by her grandfather, G. Osborn. Mr. Osborn fought in several battles and the talk Wednesday was much enjoyed by all.

The ninth grade had a test in English Thursday afternoon.

Irma Smith, who has been absent with whooping-cough, will be back in school Monday. Martha Raymond will also be back after a week's illness.

We have a new scholar, Theo Newcomb.

We are sorry to lose Ancil Casler. The eighth grade had a test in history Monday.

Those who received perfect attendance certificates this month were: Russell Lowler, Philomen Lowler, Rosaline Jordan, Bart Tatar and Dorothy Fisher.

Our percentage of attendance is very low because so many had to help harvest beans and sugar beets this month.

Our enrollment sheet will not have quite so many names next month because during the past two weeks we have been losing pupils continually. Among those gone are, Frances, Dorothy and Kathleen Kohler, they moved to Grand Rapids. Elsie and Willie Vorce moved out of the district. Ed and Dan Scottas are going to Ohio. We surely miss them all and hope them best of luck in the future.

Many of the pupils attended Mr. Kohler's sale in the afternoon.

We had vacation last week to help in the beets, since then we have had better attendance.

Frank Bower has been suffering from a severe cold.

Fords sure have a kick, if you doubt it ask Russell Lowler.

We have some fine maps of North and South America which were drawn by the fourth and fifth grades.

Summer is gone and autumn is here, we used to say but now it is more like winter.

ers will have to get some spiles and Im it doesn't soon thaw up the farm-tap the sugar beets next spring to get the sugar.

The fourth and fifth grades have been doing supplementary language work lately.

Our enrollment of boys was decreased from 11 to 6 this month. The two Walters families have moved from our midst, causing this decrease. We miss Clair, Clark, Harlan, Floyd, and Frank.

We all enjoyed our Hallowe'en party on Friday, Oct. 30. Several of our mothers were present. Come again.

Our tooth-brushing contest ends Friday. You will see the list of our perfect record pupils next week.

Our school was closed Tuesday afternoon, Nov. 3, for the funeral of our moderator, Mr. Tanner.

Mr. Vance visited our school this month.

The sixth grade studied the picture, "Deer in the Forest, Twilight." They enjoy the paintings of this artist, Rost Bonheur, very much.

The primary grades are making the health poster, "Eat some vegetable besides potatoes every day."

We have learned the song "America the Beautiful."

We extend a hearty welcome to everyone to come and visit our school.

Our percentage of attendance has been very good this month in spite of so many colds.

Our windows are decorated with jack-o'-lanterns, black cats and witches.

We took a stroll to the woods one afternoon to gather leaves to decorate with.

We had a Hallowe'en party Friday, Oct. 30.

The language classes are eager to have "Story hour," because we like to hear new stories.

Those who were neither absent nor tardy last month are, Walter Karnel, Kenneth Martin, Stephen Straus and Dorothy Tilmann.

Our visitors were, Helen Hauck, Vera Smith, Agnes Pantenbury, Ruth Martin and Leora Elais.

We are all striving to get higher standings in our work this month.

My! but you folks that stayed home don't know what you missed by not attending our school fair last Friday. On arriving at the school house we were met by a poster of "welcome," above the door. The room was beautifully decorated in autumn leaves, daisy chains, black cats and jack-o'-lanterns, which made us think of Halloween. We had on exhibit fine specimens of wheat, barley, oats, early dent corn, black and rice pop corn, early white kidney beans, early red valentine pea beans. Beets should have special mention, some of them being of enormous size. Sugar beets weighing from seven to eight pounds, one garden beet measured 10 inches in diameter through the center and 12 inches in length, two mangels 6 inches in diameter and 18 inches in length, other vegetables such as, rutabagas, onions, squash, pumpkins, potatoes, turnips, and a fine display of apples were also in evidence. Canned fruits, and vegetables, and jelly made a fine display. One person remarked, we had a better display than was shown at the county fair. While for curiosities we had a German mark and bayonet, a helmet and gas mask, also a pair of fire tongs a hundred sixty years old. All present were invited to attend a show to see the prettiest baby in the district. All were unanimous in their decision in its favor. And last but not least, was a dainty luncheon of coffee, cocoa, and cake, all of which was made and served by the children themselves.

Search Your Attic
For Old StampsFortunes Have Been Found on Old Envelopes

Many old stamps, both U. S. and Confederate, are worth from $50 to $5,000. The hobby of stamp collecting is of far greater importance nowadays than in times past when it was generally considered as a pastime for schoolboys only. Today collectors eagerly seek out and pay huge prices for those stamps which are scarce to the point of being worth hundreds or even thousands of dollars. Last year in Paris at a stamp sale one stamp of British Guiana was sold for $32,500—this being the highest price ever paid for a single stamp. People who make a bonfire of "grandfather's letters" do not realize they may be burning rare stamps, which if sold might make them rich.

Make a thorough search through attics and storerooms for old letters mailed from 1845 to 1870. Keep the letters if you wish, but send the envelopes (or folded letters) to Mr. Harold C. Brooks, Box 321, Marshall, Michigan. Mr. Brooks, who is mayor of his city, is a private collector and is said to pay better prices than a dealer. During the past twelve years he has paid thousands of dollars for envelopes bearing old stamps. He specializes in United States and Confederate stamps, but also collects Canadian and other foreign issues, provided they are on the original envelopes and mailed not later than 1870. Loose stamps he does not buy except very old issues unused or mounted collections formed before 1880. Revenue stamps such as found on old photographs, mortgages, deeds, etc., are not wanted. Other things like old coins, Confederate money, old relics, may have value, but he is not interested in these.

Shown below are illustrations of a few rare stamps and the amounts Mr. Brooks agrees to pay to anyone who may find them. Beside these are many others of equal value.

AUTOMOBILE TAX IS DOOMED; OTHERS TO BE REMOVED TOO

Committee Report Very Favorably on Bills For Tax Removal

Washington—Reduction of the automobile taxes and repeal of many of the special excise levies was voted Tuesday by the house ways and means committee.

The tax on all grades of cigars was reduced and the levy on alcohol was cut in half. Other taxes which the committee would repeal are those on jewelry, camera lenses, photograph films and plates, fire arms and ammunition, smoker's articles, coin operating machines, work of art and mah-jong sets.

No change was made in the taxes on admissions and dues, although the committee voted to exempt legitimate theaters housing the spoken drama from the admission tax if the treasury deems it advisable.

The following occupational taxes, which apply on proprietors, were repealed: Brokers, including pawn brokers, ship and customs house brokers; billiard rooms and bowling alleys; shooting galleries, riding academies, autos for hire, tobacco manufacturers and yachts and motor boats.

It was also agreed to reduce from $3 to $1 the annual tax on physicians who dispense narcotics and to cut from 50 cents to 25 cents the tax on each deed or conveyance amounting to $500.

The total amount of revenue which the government would lose as a result of the changes would amount to slightly more than $100,000,000. Chairman Green said, and would wipe from the statute virtually every so-called nuisance tax.

Many of the levies which the committee voted to repeal yielded less revenue annually than it cost the government to collect the tax. Chairman Green said.

In reducing the alcohol tax the committee would cut the rate of $2.20 a proof gallon to $1.65 a gallon, effective as of Jan. 1, 1927, and to $1.10 a gallon effective Jan. 1, 1928.

The cuts ordered in the taxes on cigars followed: small sizes from $1.50 to 75 cents a thousand; class A, from $4 to $2.50; class B, from $6 to $4.50; class C, from $9 to $7; class D, from $12 to $10.50; class E, from $15 to $13.50. It was estimated this would take $12,000,000 annually from the tax burden on the industry.

Under a provision approved by the committee, which is writing a new tax bill, automobile pleasure cars would be taxed at 3 per cent instead of 5 per cent and the levy on automobile trucks, wagons, tires and accessories would be wiped out.

Although a number of tentative decisions were understood to have been reached the numerous appeals for relief on the various excise levies still presented a problem as to how far the committee should go in granting them. There was some likelihood that the committee would decide to go above the limit of $300,000,000 set by the treasury and tentatively accepted by the committee for the local tax cut and thus give more relief in the miscellaneous taxes than would be possible under that figure.

Chairman Green and other committee members expressed the opinion that the treasury could stand a total reduction of $350,000,000, which would leave approximately $150,000,000 for reduction in the miscellaneous levies.

The committee has announced none of its tentative decisions, but changes understood to have been approved are cut from 5 to 3 per cent in the levy of automobile passenger cars and repeal of the taxes on automobile trucks, tires and accessories.

The tentative program is reported also to carry a 50 per cent cut in the alcohol tax—from $2.20 a proof gallon to $1.10—and reduction in the levy of cigars, in addition to outright repeal of a number of other taxes.

None of the tentative changes in rates agreed upon Monday was announced by Chairman Green pending final disposition of all the rates in the group, but a reduction in the levy on automobile passenger cars from 5 to 3 per cent and repeal of the taxes on automobile trucks, tires and accessories, were understood to have been approved.

The height of mountains is calculated by the use of instruments and trigonometry. If the instruments are accurate and there is no error in the figures the exact height of a peak above sea level can be ascertained without ever climbing the mountain. It afterwards a figure proves to be erroneous it is the fault of the instruments or the calculation, not the method. Mathematicians do not give round numbers when they are dealing with measurable distances. Practically these exact figures are often ridiculous.

NEW DIRECTORY IS COMPLETE ONE

County Directory Is One of Best Issued Here

The new Isabella county directory, recently compiled by the O. L. Blodgett company, Lansing, Michigan, was circulated this week and is the first complete directory ever published for this city.

The directory is complete in every respect, covering Mt. Pleasant, Shepherd and rural territories. The directory is arranged in alphabetical order and for the city of Mt. Pleasant there is also a street and number directory, street and number of house is given, then the name of the resident therein.

The book is cloth bound and will retail for $10.00.

Covering All the Ground

He is a small town tailor who takes his vacation in jerks. When things become dull in his place of business, he locks up the store and leaves for a while without saying anything to anybody about it. Being told by a friend that he should have some excuse to give to his customers when he takes impromptu vacations, he printed a large sign which at frequent intervals he places upon the front door of his business place, bearing this legend: "This shop is temporarily closed. Am sick, out of town, attending a funeral or fishing."—National Republic.

Lotus in America

Nelumbo nelumbo, the Egyptian or Indian lotus, grows in abundance in a bayou of the Grand river, in Ottawa county, Michigan, and in but few other places in this part of the country. The bayou is about three miles from the village of Spring Lake, a short distance up the river from Lake Michigan, and about 30 miles west of Grand Rapids. Every year brings many visitors to the spot. Incidentally, the American lotus, Nelumbo lutea, also a very rare plant, grows in two locations near Cleveland. Both of them are in the vicinity of Huron, Ohio.

ALMA YOUTH HELD IN MOTOR FATALITY

Francis Larkin, son of Mrs. D. Larkin, of Alma, and senior in high school, is being held pending an investigation into an accident Friday night, when an automobile driven by Larkin struck George Daniels, about 60 years old, injuring him fatally. According to his story, young Larkin saw two people in the roadway near the river bridge and turned out for them, but did not see the third, who was Daniels. Frightened, the young lad, it is claimed, did not stop at the scene, but returned home. Free Press.

The Remus Co-Op Creamery was entered either Monday night or early Tuesday morning. Entrance was gained through a rear window and approximately 700 pounds of butter ready for shipment was carried off. Early Tuesday Mr. Ruetz, manager of the creamery, stated that the safe or other office equipment had not been tampered with and the butter was the extent of the loss. The intruders have not been apprehended but it is believed that it was a local job.

A. S. COUTANT SENDS LETTER FROM WEST

Has Retired from Newspaper Business; Builds New Home

A. S. Coutant, former editor of the Enterprise, wrote the following interesting letter to John Garner last week.

"While I am out of the newspaper work now, I am as busy as I can be looking after other matters. Among these is the cleaning up from the results of the burning of our home over a year ago. Too much neglect has made a bad mess worse. We want to sell 'Theview' and it must be put in order. There is a $1000 barn, $300 garage, $1000 water right, $600 fences, etc., to be kept in order until a sale.

We are preparing to build a house near the public library, court house and C. S. church. We will have some mountain view, but neighbors and friends are to be closer than these the rest of our days, perhaps. Don't know when we can come to Michigan, now.

"We have had a most beautiful and delightful fall, keep a little fire, but not much. The sun shines every day, and at two o'clock gets very hot. Indications are that we are to have rain very shortly, but they have a saying here that only new comers and fools give out weather predictions. I am neither, but that is the way I feel. "Kind regards to all the friends." Arthur S. Coutant.

JOINT CONCERT TO BE STAGED SOON

Will be Held at Normal on November 19th

The next of the series of artists programs given here under the auspices of Central Michigan Normal will be in the form of a joint concert on November 19 by Clayton Quast, baritone, and Sybil Comer, soprano.

According to the Jacksonville, (Ill.) Daily Journal, "It is difficult to speak of Mr. Quast's vocal work without using many superlatives. The beautiful quality of his voice as well as his extraordinary musical instinct, were evident in every phrase."

Many of Mr. Quast's friends will, however, be surprised to learn that he not only excels as a vocalist but has also had considerable success as a writer of verse. A setting of his poems entitled "Sing Ho to Spring," set to music by Louis Victor Saar, recently won the prize offered by the Washington (D. C.) Choral society for an American work to be used in choral setting by their society.

Robert Sanders, a young American composer who recently won a fellowship at Rome is also using Mr. Quast's "Two Lovers" in a setting of his own. The most recent composer to take advantage of some of the delightful compositions Mr. Quast has had published is Marx Obendorfer, the well known Chicago composer-pianist. Mr. Obendorfer has made a delightfully humorous setting of Mr. Quast's whimsical contribution to the controversy on evolution, entitled "A Frog's Soliloquy."

Miss Comer, in addition to two duets with Mr. Quast, will sing an aria from Verdi's Opera Aida, a group of English songs and for a special feature an unusually interesting group of Spanish folk songs done in costume.

Obituary

On Monday morning, November 2 occurred the death of Charles Little at his home in Vernon township, after an illness of over sixteen months, which was endured with wonderful patience.

Charles Little was born in Saginaw about sixty years ago, coming with his parents to Vernon township, Isabella county when about fourteen years of age, and has resided in the same neighborhood ever since. He was the eldest of a family of seven children, five boys, and two girls, The father, John Little, died eight years ago, and a brother, John, of Gilmore township died five years ago. Mrs. Philomena Little, his mother, and brothers, Edward and Bertrand, reside in Mt. Pleasant, Albert in Lansing a sister, Mrs. Tom Lawler, lives in Delwin and another sister, Mrs. Geo. Swindlehurst, lives near Marion.

In 1886 he was united in marriage to Isabella McElhenny and to this union twelve children were born, eight boys and four girls, the eldest, a boy, died in infancy. The daughters are, Mrs. Wm. Blondheim of Saginaw, Mrs. Joseph Murphy of Clare, Mrs. Charles Merrill of Harrison, who died five years ago, and Josephine, who lives in Cincinnati, Ohio. The sons are, Earl of Flint, Edward, who lives about a mile from his parental home, and Bert, Ernest, Henry, Gus, and John at home.

The funeral was held from St. Henry's church, Vernon, and was largely attended. Rev. Father Flannigan conducted the funeral services and preached a very fitting sermon on the shortness of life and the perishable things of this world. The remains were laid to repose in the St. Henry cemetery near his daughter, Mrs. Charles Merrill.

DEATH OF MRS. NILES AT HER DAUGHTER'S

Mrs. Mary Ann Niles, mother of Mrs. Rowe, of this city died early Monday morning, at the Rowe residence. At the time of her death Mrs. Niles was eighty-three years old. Four weeks ago she came to live with her daughter, but due to her advanced age little hope has been held for her recovery.

Monday the remains were taken to Grand Ledge, her old home, where services were held at the home of her son, Andrew Niles, on Wednesday.

She is survived by three children Mrs. Rowe of this city, Dr. B. D. Niles of Lansing, Henry Niles of California, Mr. Andrew Niles of Grand Ledge, also two sisters, Mrs. Antella Gray of Eagle and Mrs. John B. Allen of Grand Ledge.

City of Quaint Dress

The city of Seoul, now called Keijo the seat of the Korean government, is a place of quaint dress. White is the universal color of outer clothing, whether for men or for women. The women, who are short and fat, wear fantastic balloon cotton skirts. The men wear a "Mother Hubbard" robe, baggy trousers tied at the ankles, and a transparent "plum" hat, many sizes too small, tied under the chin. Long thin whiskers, great horn-rimmed goggles, hair put up in a queer topknot to signify manhood, and pipes with stems two or three feet long complete the picture. When in mourning for a male relative a man wears an immense straw hat shaped like a toad stool.

Getting Into the Game

By J. A. WALDRON

(Copyright.)

"I WISH papa had less money," said Marjorie Paxton to Guy Martin. They had met by plan clandestinely, against parents' wishes, but they were in love. "He would be more reasonable about you, dear, if he had less!"

"Well, I've got enough money for us to start on, darling, if you want to take a chance with me."

"Oh, no! I just couldn't elope, or anything like that! We must wait. If I dared tell him we're really engaged, you might have Thanksgiving dinner with us!"

"Small chance of that, little girl! Thanksgiving is only a few weeks away!"

"But who knows? Really, though, how much money have you, dear?" They were having luncheon in a quiet restaurant. Marjorie, as she asked the question, sipped her tea daintily. He adored every tiny movement her rare grace formulated.

"Well, I could raise twenty thousand dollars on a pinch, from what has been left me. And I think I have a knack of getting along."

"Of course you have! But twenty thousand dollars! Papa would call that 'chicken feed'! Why, only last night, at dinner, when he had Mr. Strong, one of his partners in business, they talked of spending twenty million dollars on one spot!"

"Some spot, I should say."

"They are quietly buying that block on Green, Hudson, Clinton and Vander streets for a new soap factory—one of the largest in the world!"

"Soap! What wonders are achieved in thy name! Well, little girl—my little girl—we shall wait a while, as you wish. But we can't wait forever, you know!"

Two weeks afterward, having sent in his card, Guy waited in the ante-room of the elaborate offices of the Universal Soap corporation of which Hiram Paxton was president. Guy hardly expected courtesy, but he was asked in.

Hiram Paxton swung in his easy chair and faced his visitor. "Well, young man, what is it?" he asked raspingly.

"I want to marry your daughter Marjorie," Guy bluntly replied.

"You do, eh? Rather ambitious. What is your vocation, if the question is not impertinent?"

"I'm experimenting, sir. Haven't yet fixed upon what I may really do."

"A dilly-dallier, eh? Well, young man, my daughter, for whom I have ambitious plans, may think something of you. I should worry about it if I were not convinced that a girl's fancy is ephemeral. I heard you play the piano and sing to her one evening when neither of you knew I was in the house. A mere girl thinks a lot about such things. I have casually asked her about you, though with no desire whatever that you should become my son-in-law. She says you are also a beautiful dancer. And possibly you play games as well—say poker, for instance?"

"Oh, I have played poker in a strictly social environment. And I also play tennis, golf and bridge."

"Ah! Quite accomplished! Apparently a young man of leisure. But from my slight knowledge of the arts in which you assume to be proficient, I doubt if you ever become a virtuoso in any of them. Doubtless you imagine that you can take the place of Paderewski—who has become a politician—as a pianist?"

"Oh, no, sir."

"Possibly you think you can be a Caruso?"

"Hardly. I'm a baritone."

"Maybe you can dance as well as some of the persons who are said to command large salaries in that field?"

"Mr. Paxton, you'll excuse me—I'm an amateur in all those things. And I have no ambition for public applause."

"Then what is your bent?"

"I'm thinking of going into real estate."

"Going into 'is good!" Hiram laughed cynically.

"But one has to start in anything, you know."

Hiram's laugh became raucous. "Say, young man, I'm busy, but I want to give you a pointer. You've heard of Wall Street sharks?"

"In a general way."

"Well, they're simply sunfish compared with the species in real estate. I'll tell you something: My company has been trying to get hold of a certain block on the West side of town where lax improvement has kept the prices low. We worked quietly, and bought three-quarters of the block, only to find that the most desirable quarter had been tied up on an option. There's no record of the matter yet, and we can't imagine who the devil could have got wind of our plans. You see what an opportunist you have to 'get into real estate'!"

"In the language of the Street, you mean what they call 'a fat chance'?"

"Exactly that. A fat chance."

"Well, Mr. Paxton, I'm the one who tied up that quarter of the block. I hold the option."

Exactly

"Why did you never marry, Smith?" "I thought several times of doing so, but finally decided not to."

"The victory of mind over matrimony, so to speak."—Boston Transcript.

"THE WIFE WHO WASN'T WANTED" with Irene Rich in a pictureization of this novel.

CHAPTER V

It was a lofty brightly lighted room. A room with all the attributes of cheerfulness, yet gloomy and depressing, as if some taint of the prison cells beyond had leaked forth to fill the atmosphere with vague apprehension and forboding. A long railing paralleled one side of it, and behind this was a raised desk, at which sat a policeman sergeant. Ordinarily his was a good humored face, but tonight it was stern and severe as he gazed down at the young people before him.

And what a change had an hour wrought in these hilarious merry-makers from Bob Mannering's birthday party? What an ending to so happy a day? Diane Bledsoe was there clinging to Theo Saturn as if expecting to find in his weak and dissipated nature the firm support she so needed in this trial. Now her light hearted gaiety had departed, her carefree indifference faded. Face to face with stern reality, she was but a frightened girl shocked to the point of tears by the ordeal she had experienced. Confronted by a new world of stern and unyielding possibilities, she awaited with fear and trembling what the future held in store for her. Theo Saturn too, seemed another person. Shorn of his half insolent self confidence, he stood exposed, a sorry spectacle. A scared boy; even worse, a weakling, a coward unmasked. Bob stood apart. Sadly shaken by the accident, he seemed bewildered by it all, yet met it gamely. In his manner was proof of the good stock from which he sprang. He might be mistaken, aye, wrong, but he would face the consequences squarely.

Slowly and with painstaking care the sergeant inscribed the names of the trio on the page before him, the silence of the room broken only by the scratch of his pen and the louder tick of the big clock upon the wall. Then he raised his eyes to fix a glance of inquiry upon an officer who entered hastily from an adjacent room.

"We have finally managed to locate the District Attorney," he reported. "He says to hold the prisoners until he arrives. He will be right down."

The words seemed to arouse Bob. Shaking off the lethargy which held him, he glanced up with a startled air.

"See here," he protested wildly. "Not him—don't send for him No, no."

The sergeant's eyes dropped to the page before him. Then he raised them to shoot a curious glance at Bob, but only to quickly center his attention upon Theo Saturn.

"The big car is registered in your name, it is your car. Were you driving at the time of the accident?"

There was something almost frantic in the eagerness with which Theo responded.

"No, no, sir. I wasn't near the wheel. I had given it up. I was very tired, sir. I gave up the wheel a long time before the accident, away back along the road. It must have been five, ten, fifteen miles back—maybe more—"

"Hold on—you were in the car, weren't you? If you keep on, you never started."

"Oh, yes, sir, I was in the car, but I wasn't driving. I'm an awful careful driver myself. You can look up my record—I never had an accident in my life—that is a real accident. I'm very careful about all the traffic rules and everything." Now there was a note of triumph in Theo's voice. "You see, being tired, I wouldn't even drive, that is why I gave up the—"

"So you said," interrupted the sergeant drily. "Too bad you got so tired—things might have been different. You are quite sure you hadn't been drinking any bad hootch, are you—to make you so tired?"

Theo looked shocked, also even more flustered than before.

"Drinking? Oh, no, sir. I never, that is, er—I hardly ever."

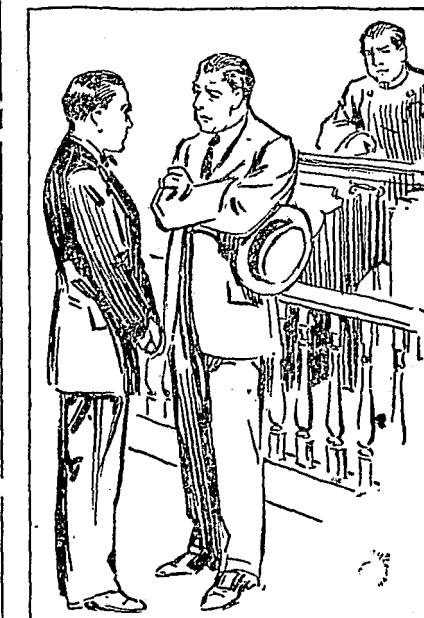

"All right. I haven't time for your life's history now." A new emphasis crept into the sergeant's tones. "But there was something wrong in that car long before you hit the roadster. The motorcycle policeman's report proves it. He trailed you for several miles. He says you were all over the road and nearly in the ditch a dozen times. What I want to know is, who was driving?"

For an instant Theo seemed upon the point of speaking. Then, with an effort, he sealed his lips, opening them only when the keen gaze of the sergeant seemed to bore into his innermost soul, to mutter nervously, if upbraidingly, "It wasn't me, sir, no, sir, it wasn't me."

Now the stern gaze of the sergeant shifted to rest upon Diane. Bereft of her usual coolness and composure, she seemed to shrink, a trembling, terrified girl, under its severity.

"Were you?" he demanded.

Apparently she could not meet his eyes. Her own swept the room as if John Mannering's lips were sealed as he faced his son.

In frantic search of aid in her plight. Suddenly she shook her head wildly. "No, no!" she cried. Then, quick as a flash, turned upon Bob, and her accusation rang out unmistakable in its clearness. "He was!"

Again that same air of complexity seemed to have claimed Bob. At her words he turned towards her and looked her straight into her eyes. It was a strange look. There was bewilderment and pain in it. The world had changed so suddenly for him. His happy, care-free life seemed very far away.

But she, who had merely related a fact, seemed to flinch and quail under his glance, the poise and self assurance which had been such a part of her being forgotten.

With never a word Bob turned from her.

And still, as if not fully satisfied with what she had done, Diane turned back to Theo and grew almost hysterical in the persistence of her accusation.

"It was he, it was Bob who was driving! Wasn't it, Theo? You know he was driving, don't you, Theo?"

Under her questions Theo shifted nervously upon his feet, shot a glance at Bob and finally stared at the stern visage of the officer of the law as if fascinated.

"Yes—it was—" His voice trailed off into a whisper.

As if satisfied, the sergeant frowned and gave his attention to Bob.

"If that woman dies, Mannering, it will take all of your pull to get you out of this mess."

"Dies!" It was as if Bob could not believe his ears. Indeed, as if there were very much about the situation in which he found himself which he could not reconcile. Now a sudden movement of the sergeant and a sound from the door attracted his attention.

John Mannering entered. Plainly shaken by anxiety, his face was ghastly white, and he paused for an instant as if to collect himself for the ordeal which was to follow. Then he moved forward, to stop before Bob and gaze into his face.

Yet such was his emotion that he seemed at a loss for words. What thoughts were his at the moment? Inured by the experience of years to similar scenes amidst such surroundings, the meaning of it all must have recurred to him with redoubled force. Here was the machinery of the law erected by the people of the state for their own protection, just as he had been chosen by these same people as their sworn representative in the enforcement of their laws. To him these proceedings had always had a solemn majesty, his part in their equitable application a solemn trust. His to see that the clear course of justice was unsullied, its penalties applied without fear or favor. Yet now, within the very shadow of the law, with its firm clutches poised above him, stood his son—the pride of his heart, the hope of his coming years.

Within him John Mannering's high sense of justice, his cold judicial mind was arrayed against his heart; his professional honor was set off against his parental love. And even more, for there was Eileen, his own beloved, to whom the welfare and happiness of the boy was dearer than life itself.

Under such circumstances it was not strange that John Mannering's lips were sealed as he faced his son. What words could express his thoughts? What sentences could picture the battle waging within his breast?

Yet even amidst the turmoil of feeling which shook him he must have taken pride in the bearing of his son. For at that moment Bob carried himself bravely and met the gaze of his father unflinchingly.

Only for a moment did John hesitate before his son. He moved towards the sergeant, his face grim and resolute. Leaning towards that official, he was again a lawyer, the chosen representative of the people considering the facts laid before him calmly and dispassionately and most remarkable of all under the circumstances, impersonally.

So he was engaged when again the door opened and Eileen appeared.

"Bob!" she cried at sight of her son, and again, "Bob!" Heedless of all else in the room, she rushed towards him with outstretched arms.

He stiffened, flushing hotly at sight of her, but as she reached him and gathered him in her arms he yielded promptly to her embrace.

So she clasped him to her breast, giving expression to countless inarticulate expressions of endearment and patting him fondly upon the back. Suddenly she drew back and gazed anxiously into his face.

"You are not hurt, Bob?"

He shook his head.

"But in that awful wreck how did you ever manage to escape without a scratch?"

"I don't know," he whispered huskily.

"It was marvelous—it seems almost too good to be true. All the way here I have pictured the most dreadful things that might have happened to you, dear—fearing to find you hurt in some awful way. Perhaps it would be just as well if we have a doctor look you over—there might be internal injuries?"

"I haven't a scratch, mother, honestly."

Once more she enfolded him in her arms. Her son was safe and sound. Beside the wonder of her relief over that fact all else mattered little. But now, as she released him, she seemed to give some thought to his surroundings and to her husband at the police sergeant's desk.

"Did you ever hear of such a narrow escape as Bob had, John?" she asked.

"It was marvelous," he agreed, but there was a curious restraint in his manner as he spoke.

"The mere shock of such an experience must have been terrible," she continued.

John Mannering nodded gravely, but turned to stare down at the papers on the sergeant's desk with anxious eyes.

"I think, I am sure, John, that Bob ought to be home."

John hesitated, the police sergeant eyeing him curiously the while. When he spoke it was evasively.

"There are some matters here which must be attended to first, Eileen."

Too well did Eileen know her husband for his manner to escape her, nor was she slow to draw her own conclusions concerning it.

"I know. I heard that Bob was arrested," she said with a catch in her voice.

Again her husband merely nodded. "You can pay my fine so that he can go, can't you, John?"

He swallowed hard as if there was a great lump in his throat, and when he spoke there was a strained timbre to his tones.

"I'm afraid, Eileen, this is not a matter to be settled by a fine."

"Why, it was just an automobile accident, John." For the first time Eileen seemed to give heed to the presence of Diane and Theo Saturn as she turned and eyed them for a second. "Nothing more than a group of young people on their way home from a party. Surely there is no reason to take such a matter seriously. None of them were hurt."

"It means, it means, dear, that there can be no bail in this case."

"No, none of them were hurt," agreed John gently. "But you forget the other car, dear. There was a woman in that who was hurt, quite badly hurt, I'm afraid."

"Yes, but Bob had nothing to do with that, surely," persisted Eileen. "It appears that Bob was driving Theo's car, dear."

"Bob driving Theo's car?" she repeated and turned to her son as if expecting a denial from him.

But Bob might have been a statue for any heed he seemed to give to what was going on. He stood there gazing straight before him with that puzzled, uncertain look upon his face, yet with some of his father's determination there, too.

His very attitude seemed to make his mother willing to go to any lengths to assist him. Again she turned to her husband.

"Surely, John, you can't expect Bob to remain here much longer. Can't you at least arrange bail for him?"

"Possibly, dear," he said with a strange reluctance for a man who had agreed to bail bonds in a thousand cases as a mere formality. And now with his wife pleading before him in behalf of his own son, he hesitated, strangely moved and again grew evasive. "But there are considerations, very many considerations to be regarded in such matters."

"Considerations which will keep Diane and Theo here, too?" she demanded with a warmth which caused the sorely tried maid to cling even closer to Theo Saturn and to arouse even greater fear in the latter's soul.

"I think not," explained John patiently. "You see as Bob was driving he becomes the principal—that sets him apart from the other occupants of the car."

"To stay here—in this place—alone, John?" cried Eileen in horrified tones. More pronounced than ever was that evasiveness in John's answer. A strange thing indeed, in one ordinarily so decisive.

"That depends, dear—"

"Depends—depends on what, John?"

And then as if driven to the point of desperation by his manner, she burst forth accusingly: "You are trying to keep something from me, John. I want to know what it is. I can't bear this suspense."

For an instant there was a break in his poise.

"It is hard for me to bear, too," he said, and it was almost as if he had groaned aloud.

Quick as a flash she took advantage of his slip.

"Bear what? Tell me, John—bear what?"

As if unwilling to speak he gazed at her and there was anguish in his face, but pity, too, pity for her. And as they waited there the silence of the room was broken by a telephone bell. A bell shrill and emphatic in its summons and with so ominous a clamor that it startled everyone in the room and caused them to watch the police sergeant as he returned to the instrument and placed the receiver to his ear.

Eileen forgotten for the moment, John leaned towards the sergeant tense with expectancy.

So quiet was the room that the harsh grate of the instrument was plainly audible as the message came over the line.

Methodically the sergeant received it and hung the receiver in its place. Then he turned gravely to John.

"The woman has just died, sir." John white as a sheet, straightened himself. He seemed to be tensing his muscles to bear up against an awful shock.

Bob eyed him with that same puzzled look on his face.

But Eileen, as if intuitively sensing evil in that message, turned to her husband, her face pale with fear.

"That message—just what does it mean, John?" she gasped. "Tell me quick just what does it mean?"

He moved towards her, his own face ghastly under the emotion which shook him. He put his arm around her to support her and there was a great tenderness in his voice when he spoke.

"It means, it means, dear, that there can be no bail in this case."

He swallowed as if it was only with an effort that he could go on.

"Bob—Bob is wanted for manslaughter."

A "COUNTRY GIRL'S" OPINION

I was very much interested in the Editorial "Now Comes the Bread Trust," in the Oct. 23, issue of the Enterprise.

It is a fact that very few in the cities bake their own bread and a surprising number in the country that buy their bread. Some that were good bread makers before the war, seem somehow to have lost the art. Whether it was due to using substitutes at that time I cannot say, but know that since then they have been buying baker's bread, because they say they cannot make good bread any more. Many say it is cheaper to buy bakery bread because their family do not care for bread unless it is fresh and they could not bake every day, they would have to bake several loaves at a time.

Bread making is indeed an art, and like many other kinds of art, it is not every one that can become proficient at it no matter how hard they seem to try. And for such, bakery bread is no doubt better for their family.

These are some of the reasons, but there must be other and greater reasons why each year more and more women buy their bread. It may be "Evolution," and the prophesy that someone made years ago is coming true. That the time is coming when women will no longer do their own cooking, sewing or laundry work, because it will be done outside the home by people scientifically trained, and will therefore be done better and more cheaply, because it will be done on a large scale with modern appliances.

Mothers will then have opportunity to devote their time to their profession, and not divide it up, as now a mother must be cook, dressmaker, laundress, house-keeper, scrub woman, butter maker (if on the farm), besides nurse and mother. Children will be better trained and better cared for. Motherhood will become a profession, and along with mother's love will be mother's scientific understanding of the human race.

It may be that the "vision" may yet come true, of the man who saw "a race without disease of flesh or brain, stately and fair." Also, the day may come when his prophesy of "a world without a slave, man at last is free, nature's forces have by science been enslaved, and lightning and light, wind and wave, frost and flame are the tireless toilers of the human race," will become a fact. To us today it all seems but a Utopian dream.

The bread trust may be bad for us, for many of the good things we have today may grow great good for future generations. So out of the bread trust of today may grow great good for future generations.

HELPED THROUGH CHANGE OF LIFE

Took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound during This Critical Time—Benefited Greatly

Baltimore, Maryland.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to help me through the Change of Life and for a broken-down system. I had been complaining a long time and a doctor along had tried other medicines which did not help me much. I read in the newspapers of the Vegetable Compound and after taking a bottle I felt better. I did not stop with one bottle, but took it through the whole critical time and am now practically a well woman. I have two daughters whose health was very bad before they married and I was worried about them. I got the Vegetable Compound for them and it helped them, and after they married it also helped them in bearing their babies. This is a great and good medicine for all complaints of women, and I recommend it to all."

—Mrs. L. GINGRICH, 1375 N. Gilmer St., Baltimore.

The Vegetable Compound is a dependable medicine for women of middle age. Let it relieve you of nervousness, that feeling of strain and those annoying hot flashes so common at this time.

To Each His Fear

By MARY W. OVINGTON

(© 1925, Western Newspaper Union.)

"YOU shouldn't treat your little sister so, Carl."

A child of three was clapping his mother's skirts and screaming with terror.

"I didn't do anything," the child's brother grumbled. "I just said 'Boo' to her. She's a 'fraid cat.'"

"It's wrong to frighten a little child. Molly may never get over it," and the mother picked up the child in her arms.

Her small son stifled a hoot and ran off. The little girl continued to utter shriek after shriek. Terror gripped her heart and convulsively shook her small body.

It would have been well if Frederick Blake had seen this incident before he married Molly Carter. However, he would have been a small boy at the time and doubtless would have joined her brother in jumping out at her. When he met Molly he was attracted not only by her good looks but her high spirits and her fine record at sports. She never lost her nerve at tennis, even at the most exciting tournament. He was therefore utterly astonished when his wife went into hysterics because he came upon her suddenly when she was sitting alone in the library looking into the fire. She clutched his arm and screamed, and he laughed and called her what her brother had called her before, a "fraid cat."

Molly's nerves certainly were on edge those first months of married life. Her best friends had to admit it. But it all began, she declared, with the awful shock of Fred's entrance into the library that afternoon. He had flung his hand on her shoulder and called in that great voice of his before she knew he was within a mile of the place.

It was a slippery, sloppy, harsh winter. There was no chance for outdoor life. Molly took cold and hugged the fire and was often out of sorts. Her husband retorted by teasing her. His laugh, that his wife had once loved, grew hateful. At length, one evening, when as she firmly believed he deliberately jumped at her from behind a door, her terror knew no bounds. This time she hurried into her hat and coat and went to her mother's, and declared she intended never to live with him again.

"She can't mean it," he declared to Mrs. Carter, looking at her with fear in his eyes. "Molly wouldn't treat me like that."

When the trunks went out of the house, Carl was standing with his friend in the hall. "Looks like business," he remarked, and then, seeing Fred's face, went quietly away. He could not forget those sorrowful eyes, like a dog's.

Fred began to dissipate. The maid left and his house took on a desolate look under the chance ministrations of scrub women. He lived a good deal at the country club. Everybody who saw Molly told her that she was doing wrong. But she would not give in. "She has been humiliated," Carl thought. "That's the chief trouble. Now if she could only see Fred in a blue funk. 'To each his fear.' Did Kipling say that? Now I wonder."

Three days after this, at midnight, Molly was awakened suddenly by her brother's pounding at her door. "Wake up," he cried. "Fred's horribly sick. Afraid he can't live. I've been with him two hours and have just rushed up for you. Get on your things, won't you?"

He need not have said the last words for she was already jumping into her things.

"You mustn't be too shocked," Carl explained as they entered the house. "Fred's terribly scared. You remember that newspaper story two weeks ago? Fred knew one of the men who died."

Her husband's face was perfectly white and he looked scared and helpless. She leaned over and kissed him until she brought the color to his cheeks. Then she looked about.

"And now," she said, when the patient looked like himself, "the nurse is discharged. I want you two to realize," and she glanced from one to the other with a satisfied smile, "that I've seen through your little hoax."

Her husband, excited, incoherent, sat up in bed and declared that she was mistaken, utterly mistaken; but her brother gave an old well-remembered boy's hoot. "You caught on, kid, and no mistake. Only don't forget, Fred wasn't on the inside. He's innocent. I gave him the stuff, but I suggested poison and he did the rest. He's got a powerful imagination. 'Fraid cat!'"

He stuck out his tongue at his brother-in-law as though he were eight years old, and then dashed out of the room. Fred leaped from bed and pursued him. In a second Molly heard the outer door slam. When her husband came slowly back she was shaking with laughter.

"I believe, dear," she declared, "that I'm cured, cured of being frightened. I can see the funny side of it."

Her husband did not smile. "I'm cured, too," he said solemnly. "I'm cured of teasing. For I can see the tragedy."

HAVE IT YOUR OWN WAY "Cold Winter" Battle Rages

Michigan farmers are being warned against placing fait his forests of an extremely cold winter ahead to be followed by an unseasonable summer in 1926. The winter may be extremely cold and the summer unseasonable, but scientists have no means of telling it at this early date. A week is the longest dip possible into the weather future.

Neither is there reason for believing that the winters in this section are no longer so cold nor the summers so hot as formerly, according to investigation of weather bureau figures on the point, running back three decades. The mean December-January-and-February temperature over for the decade 1905-1914 it was 22.4, the decade 1895-1904 was 20.0 degrees; and for 1915-1924, 30.9 degrees, a difference of 10.9 degrees in the total range. The mean temperature for the same three winter months last year was 21.0 degrees.

"Snows that lay on the ground months on end, skating that began in November and lasted until March, snow drifts that reached almost any height one might mention, were the exceptional occurrences in grandfather's day as they are today," they declare. "One mild winter starts the rumor that overcoat manufacturers had better go into the Palm Beach suit business, while an extremely cold winter is dubbed as a good old for this is that memory is tricky and recalls the exceptional rather than the average. Another is that modern living has taken the edge off the extreme weather. A snowfall that our forefathers would have trodden under foot for days now is shoveled away before we get up in the morning. Better heating, too, makes us feel the low temperature less, and ice refrigerating plants and electric fans make the extremes of heat more endurable."

While the weather is constantly changing from one year to another, big climatic changes are too gradual to be observed in the lifetime of one or even a hundred generations, they state. Scientists figure that the climate of this continent has not changed the passing of the glacial period, and in some ten million years, not since probably will not for another ten million.

TRUNK LINES AND CROSS ROADS Highway Overseers Take Notice

Under the decision of the State Highway Department to scrape the snow off the Trunk Lines in the county, a serious problem itself concerning the service of the rural mail carriers. It is very evident that when the snow is kept off the main roads, there will be considerable time during the winter when they will be bare and unfit for sleighs. During this same time there will be many roads, especially the cross roads, where a car cannot be driven on account of the snow, so that if the carrier drives a sleigh, the Trunk Lines will be impassable, and if he drives a car the cross roads will be impassable. How is the carrier to serve his route under such conditions? And every carrier has some of the main roads to serve. There is only one answer to the problem, that is that the various overseers must see to it that the cross roads are kept open so that the mails can be carried. Otherwise, under the recent ruling of the Post Office Department, such roads as are not kept open will have to be cut out and the rural mail service will suffer just in proportion to the mileage that is not served.

I am calling the attention of over to this matter now, so that adequate preparations can be made to have the cross road opened—either the snow scraped off the road or vehicles driven through to open the way, so that the carrier will not be left to his own resources in fighting the drifts. A carrier might be able to get through a mile or so occasionally, but to expect him to open ten or fifteen miles after every storm is expecting the impossible, and he will not be obliged to do it. Patrons of the routes should be willing and glad to assist in maintaining service regularly.

Obituary

Donna, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Kirkconnell, came to this world Sept. 5, 1923, and after a brief stay to do her mission, so well performed, passed on to her rest, Nov. 3, 1925.

The flower, entrusted to our care, has faded, but the seed will grow and we hope produce the kind of seed she bore. Her example was to all patient in life and also in death. She leaves to mourn her loss, her father and mother, two brothers, Dale six years and Walter five weeks, and a host of friends and neighbors. Her body lies in Riverside cemetery, but her soul has returned to the giver of life.

Automobile Club Objects to Excise Tax on Cars

Saginaw, Mich. October 20, 1925
Whether members of the Automobile club of Northern Michigan are in favor of removal of the federal excise taxes on automobiles—it is believed by officers of the club that they are—will be ascertained by action the club is now taking to secure an expression of their sentiment.

Cards are being sent to all members of the club asking them to give their position on the matter and petition may be circulated asking repeal of the tax. The matter is being handled by the law and ordinance committee of the club, headed by Albert W. Black of Bay City and officers of the club believe that interest among members will be strong.

It is claimed by advocates of the repeal of the war excise taxes on automobiles that there is no longer any reason for retention of this tax, the last of the big war excise taxes. The luxury and nuisance taxes on many other things have long since been removed and there is no reason for retaining that on automobiles, it is maintained.

Members submitted to the tax willingly as long as there was real necessity for it, but now they feel that it can be removed without damage to the government, in view of the governmental surplus, and they feel that it is their turn to receive relief, it is declared. It is now an unfair burden upon them, they insist.

FAITHFULNESS OF EMPLOYEES RECOGNIZED BY BIG COMPANY

One of the most unusual dinners ever given in this country was that on October 28 in Cincinnati at which time W. K. Schoepf, retiring president of the Cincinnati Traction company, took occasion to commend the large number of the company's employees who have been in its service for a quarter of a century and longer.

The employees, more than 450 in number, were guests at the banquet and after hearing the unusual tribute of appreciation from their head, were each presented a solid gold Gruen Precision Veri-thin watch engraved with name and date.

More and more are the big institutions coming to appreciate the faithful employee, who gives the best there is in him year after year in his employer's interests. There are many of such men and women, too.

VISIT SCHOOL NEXT WEEK

President Coolidge has designated the M. E. church, tomorrow, Saturday, next week (November 15 to 21) as American Education Week. It is the purpose of this special week to call attention to the importance of education and to take a little time to visit the schools. All the schools of the city are to observe the week and special visiting days are as follows:

Sacred Heart Academy, Wednesday.
Training school, Thursday.
Fancher school, Tuesday.
Kinney school, Friday.
West Side school, Monday.

On Tuesday evening parents are invited to visit the high school and the central grades. School will be in session from 7 to 8 o'clock, and at 8 o'clock, American Education exercises, under the joint auspices of the public schools and the American Legion will be held in the auditorium. The address will be delivered by Rev. H. D. Johnson of Clare.

Everyone in the city should visit one or more schools during the week.

Now is the time to prepare for the annual County Club exhibit to be held at the Central Michigan Normal school agricultural department. The exact date has not been definitely announced as yet but will come about the first week in December. Those of you who have been in the county the past several years are familiar with the requirements of this work. Those of you who are new in the county will receive instructions in the near future. As usual there will be cash prizes. Part of it belongs to your school if you go after it.

all its interests to God and his will is prayer in the deepest sense. Jesus taught to pray "Thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven," and his prayer in the Garden was, "Not my will but thine be done." In John 15:7 he says: "If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ask whatsoever ye will and it shall be done unto you." The granting of our prayers is conditioned on our abiding in him and his words abiding in us. The harmony of the human will with the Divine will and purpose is the starting point of all genuine prayer.

"Prayer is also communion with God. No words may be spoken, but there is the sense of God's presence in us and about us. Our souls are born onward and upward and, like Paul, we hear 'unspeakable words.' Tennyson was right when he said:

"Speak to me, Lord, for thou hearest, and Spirit with spirit can meet,
Closer art Thou than breathing,
Nearer than hands and feet."

"Furthermore, prayer is a kind of feeling of at-home-ness with God which is beautifully expressed in Harriet Beecher Stowe's wonderful hymn: 'Still, still with Thee, when purple morning breaketh,

When the bird waketh, and the shadows flee;
Fairer than morning, lovelier than the daylight,

Dawns the sweet consciousness, I am with Thee.

"So shall it be at last, in that bright morning,

When the soul waketh, and life's shadows flee;

O in that hour, fairer than daylight dawning,
Shall rise the glorious thought—I am with Thee."

"Then prayer is petition. We make our wants known to God, not that He should be informed of our needs but that we should be placed in the attitude of receiving. Dr. H. S. Nash says, 'If we ask anything according to his will, he heareth us.' (I John 5:14) The supplications of a righteous man availeth much only when the Spirit of prompts his prayer. Jesus had this thought in mind, no doubt, when he said, 'Ask and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock and it shall be opened unto you: for everyone that asketh receiveth; and that seeketh findeth; and to him that knocketh it shall be opened.' (Matt. 7:7-8) When our prayers are prompted by His Spirit we are justified that they shall be granted.

"We should not be discouraged, however, if all our prayers are not granted; for the prayer of Jesus in Gethsemane was denied him and the prayer of Paul that the thorn in his flesh be removed was unrewarded. It was God's will that Jesus drink the bitter cup of martyrdom and that Paul be continued to be buffeted by the thorn. For the same reason many of our prayers are not granted us.

"Many of our prayers are not granted because of some sin harbored in the heart. The Psalmist said, 'If I regard iniquity in my heart, the Lord will not hear me.' (Ps. 66:18) Our motives and purposes must be pure when we come to God in prayer.

Purely selfish prayers are not answered. Our prayers must relate themselves to God's larger purpose for the whole race. Our prayers must reach beyond our own homes, our own church, our own community.

"God will not do for us what we can do for ourselves. Prayers for the removal of a fever epidemic must be followed by an attempt to remove the causes of infection. If a student prays for an education, he must put forth his best efforts to secure an education. If a father prays that his boys may grow up to be Christian gentlemen of a high order, he must give at least as much attention to the proper training of his boys as he does to breeding prize cattle and hogs. He must think at least as much of the right education of his boys as he does of stocks and bonds and bank deposits. If a man prays for the salvation of the world, he must be willing to put his money and his talents at the disposal of God for the salvation of the world. A man can not pray, 'Thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth,' unless he is ready to do everything in his power to help bring in that kingdom and accomplish that will. If a man prays that God forgive his sins and give him a clean heart, he must be willing insofar as possible to undo the sins that he has committed and right the wrongs he has done.

"The obligation is upon us to pray. We should always pray and not faint. In prayer we bring ourselves in contact with the unlimited resources of God prayer smoothes away the wrinkles of care and drives out of the mind the dark clouds of despondency. True prayer always breathes a higher and holier atmosphere. To pray is to rise on one's dead self to higher things."

MORE INTEREST IN OIL TERRITORY

Many Leases Reported in Two Isabella Townships Adjoining

During the past few weeks a new interest in the oil which underlies some parts of Midland county has been manifested in the recording of several new leases in Greendale township and in two townships in Isabella county by Fred Sias of Midland and W. K. Webber and W. F. Stevens of Saginaw. Some papers have also been filed for this section by S. E. Bortz of Midland. The Saginaw Prospecting company which is now preparing to sink its third well, has confined its activity to Ingersoll and Midland townships, it is reported.

In the leases which are being secured by Mr. Sias and the two Saginaw men they agree to "commence drilling a well on or adjacent to or within a radius of one mile of said premises within two years hereof, or pay the lessor rent at the rate of 50c per acre each year thereafter." The lease runs for five years in all and longer if oil or gas is found. One dollar is paid for the lease and an agreement is made where by one-eighth of the oil produced goes to the land owner. Should gas be found in paying quantities $200 a year rental will be paid.

Under the lease it is likely that a test well will be sunk within the two year period. Midland Republican.

FIND USE FOR OLD FARM STRAW STACK

Use of Michigan's straw stacks as valuable sources of fertilizer is promoted is a result of work being done by the soils men at the Michigan State College.

During a visit to the famous Rothamsted experiment station in England last summer, Dr. M. M. McCool, head of the college soils division, learned the methods of procedure followed in Europe and saw the materials which were being produced. That the results there were very satisfactory was shown by doubled yields of potatoes and other crops where the artificial "straw stack" manure was used. Fine results were also reported on truck crops.

That these old world practices may find a place in Michigan agriculture is indicated by the work being done at East Lansing.

The soils sections of the college is making use of straw stacks by adding water, fertilizer, and lime and permitting the stack to material to form valuable fertilizer. When ammonium sulphate, phosphates, and carbonate of lime are added to the straw and the mass moistened, fermentation takes place rapidly.

If the work is done properly, the resulting mass is brownish-black and finely divided, and is ready to use within three or four months. It appears to be very promising for use by vegetable growers, florists, and as a substitute for other top dressing materials on golf courses.

$40,000,000 SPENT IN MICHIGAN HOTELS

"Jack" Anderson, of Port Huron, president of the Michigan Hotel association, declared at the annual dinner of the East Michigan tourist association and the Northeastern Michigan Development bureau, that the hotel men's share of the money spent in Michigan during 1925 tourist and resort season was $40,000,000. The forty millions conceded as the hotel's share this season was the total amount estimated as spent in every business channel a few years ago. New estimates of a total expenditure of $200,000,000 during 1925 give some idea of what the tourist and resort business means to Michigan.

OPEN FORUM DISCUSSIONS

During the month of November the Epworth League will have charge of the evening services at the First Episcopal church. Interesting programs have been arranged for each Sunday evening which are in form of open forum discussions of live topics. The subject for Sunday evening is, "Christianity and War." The pastor will open the discussion and preside. Everybody is invited to have part in the discussion.

The subjects to be discussed at the remaining Sunday evening services are as follows:

Nov. 8, "The Amusement Question."
Nov. 15, "The Race Question."
Nov. 22, "National Prohibition."
Nov. 29, "What is a Christian?"

These meetings are open for everybody and all are invited to have part in the discussions.

Prince of Wales Among Exhibitors At International

Among the thousands of entries received by Secretary-Manager B. H. Heide in the International Live Stock Exposition which will be held in Chicago, November 28th to December 5th, was that of H.R.H. The Prince of Wales, who will exhibit his famous bull "King of the Fairies" from his western Canadian ranch. Entries have been especially heavy in the cattle classes with the milking Shorthorn breed showing the largest increase. Interest in the carload division has been greater than ever before, insuring the largest of market animals in the history of the show.

Farm boys and girls will exhibit over twenty-five percent more baby beavers in the junior feeding contest than any former year and for the first time will hold a separate auction at which their entries will be sold at the close of the show. Exhibitors will be allowed to enter their light horses in the horse show. Exhibitors horses in the horse show up to November 16th, and their live stock in the carload classes up to November 28th inclusive. When the final totals are recorded it is expected that the greatest array of purebred and market live stock ever assembled will be ready for the inspection of the army of visitors when the gates are opened on November 28th.

Fifty-one leading authorities including two from Great Britain have been invited to serve as judges in the Show, which this year for the first live stock classes alone, thirty-five international and national agricultural organizations have already announced meetings to be held during the Exposition. Twenty-five states from Oregon to Virginia have accepted an invitation to send samples of newly discovered varieties of crops to be displayed in a feature booth at the International Grain and Hay Show, which this year for the first time, is a regular department of the International.

Tree Dependent Upon Insect for Fertility

The noblest and most imposing tree in the Hawaiian Islands is the banyan. These trees do not produce seeds. Propagation is dependent upon one of the tiniest of insects, the fig wasp. The trees introduced into Hawaii, from Australia, China and India, are not propagated in the territory of Hawaii in that manner, and the tiny insects necessary to the production of mature fruit and seeds are not present there. The fig wasp goes into the figs for selfish purposes only. She is looking for a place to rear her babies, and the only places that suit her are the little flowers inside the fig. She enters each flower which is in the process of doing so, crawling in with grains of pollen which she has on her body from the older figs where she herself had grown to maturity. The figs do not mature without the agency of the fig wasps, and the latter cannot develop or exist without the presence of the figs in the proper condition for them. Numerous kinds of figs and banyan trees are native in many tropical countries, each having its own kind of minute insects called fig wasps to assist in seed production.

Washington Victor in First General Election

The first general election in the United States was held January 7, 1789. The Presidential electors so chosen met in February to vote for President and vice president.

Each elector voted for two candidates for the highest office, under a provision that the candidate receiving the largest number of votes was to be declared President, while the second choice had to be content with the vice presidency. George Washington received 69 votes and was elected President, while John Adams, with 34 votes, became vice president. Others receiving votes were John Jay of New York, 9; R. H. Harrison of Maryland, 6; John Rutledge of South Carolina, 6; John Hancock of Massachusetts, 4; George Clinton of New York, 3; Samuel Huntington of Connecticut, 2; John Milton of Georgia, 1; James Armstrong of Georgia, 1; Richard Telfair of Georgia, 1; Benjamin Lincoln of Massachusetts, 1.

Before the 1804 election the Constitution was changed so that the electors voted for a President and vice president.

His Idea of Substitutes

"So the Lord has sent you a little sister instead of the brother you asked for?" said the kindly neighbor.

Sparrows—Human Sparrows

By FRANCES E. GALE

(© 1925, Western Newspaper Union)

"SPARROWS! Nesting. Noisy, dirty, destructive; a nuisance—human sparrows!"

Hardick was seated in his special den, the little sun-room thrown out over the back porch of his bachelor home. It overlooked his garden, which terminated at the high fence separating it from a narrow public alley. Last summer it had also overlooked the two vacant lots across the alley. Across the alley there had sprung up during the fall and winter a horrible mushroom growth, a cheap apartment building, designed to house as many human beings as could decently be packed upon its five wide floors.

Hardick, in the unit seclusion of his den, looked across the blackness of sixty feet of cloud-hidden night, and could see the settling operations of men and women as they unpacked and placed belongings.

A week earlier Hardick's bookkeeper had stood by his employer's desk nervously rolling and unrolling the monthly statement just approved.

"I've promised you the raise next year," Burdick had said, not too patiently, "why do you want it now?"

The color in the young man's face deepened.

"The fact is, Mr. Hardick, I want to get married this coming fall."

"Married! Man alive, you aren't in a position to marry."

"I'm twenty-two."

"A great age, that. And how old is the young lady?"

"Twenty. I could save enough by fall to make a start if you could give me that advance now."

"See here, Morton. I could give it to you, but I won't. When I was your age I wanted to marry, too. Every boy does. But the girl had been used to a good home, servants, fine clothes. She couldn't have done without them. She didn't know it herself, but her people did, and she came to see it their way."

"What became of the young lady, Mr. Hardick—the one you were speaking of?"

"She married—a rich man."

"Was she happy?"

"I don't know," Hardick said, shortly. "She died."

The interview was fresh in his mind as he watched the gaping windows and the moving figures. Within the oblongs of light directly opposite him a girl worked alone. She wore a light summer dress protected by a big flowered apron. He could see its gay colors as she stood under the center light. Slight and graceful, she moved quickly from bureau to shelf, from range to wall-cupboard, passing back and forth between adjoining kitchen and living room, the contents of both in plain view of the onlooker. A scene of thirty years ago flashed before Hardick's mind—a girl, dark-haired like this one, willow-slim, standing by a blossom-decked tree with hands upraised to reach some bloom that later she fastened at his breast and laid her cheek beside it. His heart gave a queer twitch. What had he been doing all those years? Waiting until there should come convenient time to live. And now it was too late to live, in any real sense, at all.

There was a storm brewing in the hot, black stillness, and the girl came to the window and flung the sash high, then leaned upon the sill, looking from side to side into the darkness that enveloped her new surroundings. Silhouetted against the room's brilliance only the outline of head and body appeared, the features being invisible. Suddenly she turned and flew to open the door, through which staggered a man, laden with a box evidently of considerable weight. He lowered it to the floor, playfully evading the girl's proffered help, and began to take from it books. A flash cut the gloom outside. Thunder followed. At its crash the girl drew close to the man, who, putting his arm about her, led her to the window, evidently soothing her fears. As she stood there, clasped in the hollow of his shoulder, another electric sword leaped from the clouds and she flung her arms about him, hiding her face. He stepped back a pace, wrapping her protectingly in his arms, then with one hand turned her face upward and laid his lips upon hers in a long kiss. The light fell full upon the man's features. Hardick reached quickly for his field glasses. Through them he saw his bookkeeper, Morton, a girl with hair like Caroline's, and—Love.

"Did you have a pleasant week?" Hardick asked as his bookkeeper again stood in his office.

"Very, sir. But I'm afraid you won't be pleased at what I have to tell you. Carrie—the young lady—and I decided not to wait until the fall and were married three days ago. We've taken a little apartment in the North end, a very little one, but expenses are high and I'll have to be on the lookout for a job that will pay all I can earn. She married me against her father's wishes, so it's up to me to make good. I thought I ought to tell you."

"I guess we can manage the raise, Morton. So you wouldn't take my advice? Well, well, and you say her name is Carrie?"

"Yes, sir. Caroline Barker. Thank you very much."

"Caroline. A nice name, Morton, a nice name. You'd better give me your address. I'll run in and call upon you some time. I live out in that direction."
